Scorecard(TM) version 2.0. The IIS Email Archiving Scorecard is an in-depth technical evaluation of leading email archiving products designed to help enterprises identify the solution that best meets their specific requirements. It is an objective analysis of 250 features and metrics performed in a fully rendered production environment. The company has also developed the IIS Interactive Scorecard, a tool that helps organizations identify their specific requirements, and identify the right product for their specific requirements.

David Klein, CEO of Instant InfoSystems said, "We are often asked by our clients for specific recommendations and best practices for deployment of email archiving solutions. In response to this demand, we completed our first detailed independent analysis of multiple email archiving solutions in 2008." He further added, "Building on the success of our first Scorecard, version 2.0 of the IIS Email Archiving Scorecard includes the evaluation of key metrics such as ingestion rate and search return rate which are critical performance indicators in a production environment."

The IIS Email Archiving Scorecard reveals how the email archiving solutions perform in six major functional categories including systems archived, archiving process, architecture, e-discovery, compliance and user interface. Solutions evaluated include Enterprise Archive Solution 6.1.1.2 from Autonomy ZANTAZ, NearPoint v3.1.4 from Mimosa Systems, Professional Archive Manager v 3.6 (formerly H&S exchange@PAM) from Metalogix, Enterprise Vault 2007 SP1 from Symantec and Unified Archive v6.0.68 from ZL Technologies.

Seven key performance metrics were identified and measured to help companies evaluate the rate at which the products can archive, search and index in a production environment. Accuracy of the results was also measured. Each organization has different business and IT drivers such as e-discovery, mailbox management, compliance and litigation support. These key performance metrics play a very significant role in determining the right email archiving solution for each enterprise.

"The ability for decision makers to analyze competing solutions tested in a production environment is quite valuable for enterprise decision makers," said Michael Osterman, Principal of Osterman Research and leading industry analyst. "Even more powerful is the ability to assign weighted ratings to the features and functionality most important to an organization. This type of control over the research results allows for a truly customized tool, without arbitrary ratings for the 'best' product."

Over 900 man hours were invested in the testing and evaluation of 250 features and metrics in a production environment by a team of six technical experts. Testing was done with a focus on day-to-day usability from a customer's perspective. Most importantly, the Email Archiving Scorecard does not provide a stack ranking of products. Rather, it provides an objective analysis and customizable tool to help companies identify which of these email archiving solutions will be the best fit for an organization's specific requirements.

David Klein, CEO of Instant InfoSystems said, "Evaluating the myriad of products on the market today can be a daunting and time consuming task. Our team has the experience and expertise to ask the right questions and evaluate the features and metrics that are most important to an organization. With the IIS Interactive Scorecard, enterprises can determine which email archiving solution is right for their specific environment, saving valuable time and money."

Today, IIS presents the results of the Scorecard at the AIIM International Exposition & Conference 2009 in Pennsylvania (Track EML 02). The Technical Analysis document titled, "The IIS Email Archiving Scorecard Version 2.0: An In-Depth, Side-by-Side Technical Evaluation of Leading Email Archiving Solutions" will be available for purchase on April 30, 2009.
